The Trinity of Love.

A TALK TO MY SUNDAY-SCHOOL CLASSES.
What crossing purposes we meet in love's vocabulary! What wide divergences of meaning in the term! What differing experiences of life within its expanse! What warning posts need planting all along those differing paths! The new-born babe grows early to respond to mother love. Its little arms stretch out for mother's strength to lift its helpless form, and folded to its mother's breast, its sobbing heart finds comfort in its earliest griefs. The opposites of helplessness and helpfulness find tender meeting in their very counter-work. The sheltering parents' glow of joy at comfort given, the sense of safety found and soothing trust in-breathed, because of that protecting power, are typical of that form of love which seems at first to need no danger signals anywhere displayed.

Yet wreckage strewn this very road unless this excellence of love be watched and guarded, checked and tethered at the proper point. Because the parents still insist on undiminished guarding and unrestricted advising of their once helpless babe when erstwhile it has grown to more than childhood's powers, they either trouble or retard the progress of the new-born man or woman, or they utterly obstruct the new development, and their child, when it should become an independent, forceful power, still stays a clinging, helpless babe. Or, if the touch responsive reaches out its helping hand to shield misfortune in its misery too lavishly, too long or carelessly, the child grows negligent to use its own God-given power to overcome adversity, or, on the other hand, becomes impatient of advice and resentful of interference with its own recognized personal responsibilities. In either case more harm is done than good. Love's donor and its recipient are each one led to injury.

Now take that widely differing experience called love, that kindles as the boy and girl begin to border on the verge of manhood and womanhood. The very presence of the other one awakes an heretofore unknown delight. The touch of hands sends tingling through a frame a something it has never felt before. The touch of cheek or lips sends burning flame into the racing blood and often sets the brain ablaze. This is the basis of those conjugal alliances which in legal form unite its devotees in "holy bond" before the bridal altar. So masterful is it, so much it puts a glamour over every other phase of life, that those who come within its unchecked power lose—for the time—their rational judgment of the balance of things. Even the pledge of bridal troth is but a straw; parental counsel, as a puff of wind; the bonds of friendship are but feathers in the maddening gale that sweeps its blinded victim to his fate or hers.

Like all the appetites and passions that Infinity has planted in our being, this wondrous passion has its course of life and course of death. When crowned by reason and controlled by will it fills the life, the home, the whole community with joy and strength. When given unbridled rein its mad delirium strews sad wreckage everywhere.

These first and second forms of love have no slightest bond of kinship. They are as unlike as are food and fire. It is a great misfortune to our daily converse that they have the self-same name—love.

A third consideration of this strangely contradictory term comes startlingly into men's lives in the world-astounding "Love your enemies." This surprising word, overturning the "law" as taught by prophet and by priest—"An eye for an eye" and "a tooth for a tooth"—goes deeper down into the foundations of righteousness than that beautiful emotion which binds mother and child, invalid and nurse, or stricken one and helpful friend.

It is stronger than that masterful passion which binds boy and girl, man and maid, or mistress and paramour. It is neither emotional nor passionate, and is better understood when called by its complete synonym, Justice. It is the substance of true righteousness, and as strongly demands right judgment and right action toward an enemy as toward a friend.

It is that "perfect love" which "casteth out fear," both fear of man and fear of God, for it recognizes in its image of Jehovah the perfection of justice in all His dealings with His creation, and leads its possessor to his own utmost exercise of justice, in his judgment of his fellow-men whether friend or enemy.

When once it finds a lodgment in a life, and sends its root growths deep into that life's experience, then those two other forms of love are held in safety bounds. Its feeding comes direct from that perfect love of Him who formed us, who gave us our passions and our powers, and bids us come and learn the meaning and the just use of all that He hath given.

Golf Club Nominations.

The Glen Ridge Golf Club will hold its annual meeting at the Glen Ridge Club on Monday evening next at 8 o'clock, when the governors will elect officers for the ensuing year. The nominating committee has named the following board of governors: Harry D. Smith, Frank Goodwillie, Eugene Le Roy Oadmus, Fritz Lindenmeyr and David H. Standish.

Inspected Park Lands.

It is possible that the land near the Lackawanna railroad station in Glen Ridge, now maintained by that borough as a park, may be turned over to the Essex County Park Commission to become a part of the great Essex county park system.

Engineer Olmstead of Boston, the commission's landscape expert, and Commissioner Robert B. Sinclair of South Orange were at Glen Ridge Tuesday morning, where, with a committee representing the Borough Council, they examined the land as to its adaptability for park purposes. When asked in what respects the situation differs in Glen Ridge from that in other sections of the county which have been refused parks by the commission on the grounds that the $6,000,000 appropriated could be expended only within certain limitations, Secretary Alonzo Church said that Glen Ridge has purchased the ground, improved it and now proposes to turn it over to the commission for maintenance. The same offer, he said, has been made by Montclair. The other municipalities that have applied for parks, he said, have suggested locations that would have to be purchased and improved by the commission, and those were refused.

Deafness Cannot be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Mosquito War.

State Entomologist Smith is of the opinion that an appropriation of $350,000 by the Legislature will provide a fund that will enable him to drive mosquitoes out of New Jersey. A bill providing for such an appropriation will be introduced in the Legislature soon after the session opens. Professor Smith would use this money, if granted, to drain ponds, fill up marshes, and destroy every known breeding place of the mosquito. The amount of money desired for his warfare seems large, but a vast amount of good work can be done by its judicious use, and if the mosquito is not driven from the State, the pest will be reduced to a minimum and the public health will be greatly improved. A great deal of work, such as Prof. Smith intends to perform if the appropriation is granted, has been done by various municipalities.

In a Cosy Corner

Oftentimes the most inviting spots in a room are too far away from the furnace heat to be comfortable. A Gas Radiator obviates this trouble. It can be moved wherever desired and is an addition to the furnishings of any room. It is constructed so that the flame is visible through tiny isinglass windows, giving a cheerful glow.
